Wallace Speaks In Coffee County Despite Rainstorm

Judge George Wallace, though ill with flu and braving one of the worst storms this year, spoke to a group of supporters in Elba Saturday morning.

In Andalusia on Friday night approximately 2,000 persons heard Wallace speak. On Friday afternoon he spoke in Florida to the largest crowd to attend a political speech there so far.

He spoke to a good crowd in Kinston later in the afternoon, though he was not scheduled to appear there and the hour was changed twice because of unavoidable circumstances, during mid-afternoon. He spent Friday night in Andalusia and left there for Elba early for his 6 o'clock appointment but because of the thunder and rain storm during the night a 10 o'clock Saturday morning, which did not let up until after 9 o'clock, he was more than an hour late reaching Elba.

Traveling was almost impossible during the time he was enroute to Elba and was several hours making the approximately 35 mile distance.

But in spite of the weather he spoke to what is considered a very large crowd consisting of flooded areas and the continued rain. Seen in the picture are the ones who quickly admitted they're supporting the "Little Judge." Farmers and businessmen and even teenagers were on hand to hear the "Wallace speech." Before the "Little Judge" began his talk he made a "hand-shaking" tour of the court room in the courthouse, where the speaking took place after the outdoor appearance was canceled because of rain.

In the bottom scene of the pictures taken by The Clipper are seen two full-fledged Wallace supporters. Elba was among those who didn't let the weather dampen their spirits Saturday morning.
